NICK SAYS:

“My skill set allows me to bring a unique perspective to case management. Having the ability to understand and address the complex situations our clients encounter can be highly valuable in providing effective support. Collaborating closely with my WCM colleagues in the office and management team, who have diverse expertise and knowledge, can further enhance the effectiveness of our processes and interventions.”

BIOGRAPHY

Nick is an HCPC Registered Physiotherapist and experienced case manager. He is dedicated to supporting individuals with catastrophic injuries and complex neurological presentations. He has worked with a diverse range of conditions, including complex Musculoskeletal and Orthopaedics, Rheumatology, Acquired Brain Injury (ABI) and Stroke.

Having worked as the Lead for Student Education and Clinical Placement, at the Royal Cornwall Hospitals Trust, ongoing learning and education are strongly imbedded in his personal ethos.

One of Nick's strengths is his ability to work collaboratively as part of a multidisciplinary team, providing comprehensive care to clients and their families. He has a proven track record of helping people achieve their community-based goals and regain independence in their lives. His experience extends to collaborating with both statutory and private services, showcasing his versatility and dedication to finding the best solutions for his clients. This ability to navigate different systems and resources is valuable in ensuring comprehensive care.

As a reflective practitioner, Nick continuously learns from his experiences and has developed excellent communication skills to interact effectively with clients, families, fellow professionals, and the legal sector. His sense of humour adds a human touch to his interactions, making the supervision process constructive and manageable for all involved.

In his role as a case manager, Nick's attributes stand out. He is known for being empathetic and flexible, emphasising his client-centred approach. Placing the client's needs at the forefront, he acknowledges the significance of considering the individual within their own environment. This client-centric approach fosters strong and positive therapeutic relationships with both clients and their families.
